The Fabulous Harmonaires

By 1998, doo-wop seemed all but forgotten. The sound that once drew screaming teenage fans by the thousands was now only occasionally heard on oldies radio. That's when vocalists Scotty Tecce and Mike Napodano decided it was time to bring genuine vocal harmony back into the spotlight where it belonged.

Born on the street corners of Dallas, Texas and molded in the tradition of their idols, Dion & the Belmonts, Scotty and Mike added the sweet voice of Jay Ragojo and the captivating falsetto of Omar Yee Foon to create the faithful sound of The Fabulous Harmonaires. The quartet went on to release "King of the World," a vinyl EP for Flipside Records, and received an overwhelming response at the Viva Las Vegas Weekender in 2000 and 2002. In 2004 the group added the bass vocals of Billy Kay to complete the authentic Doo-Wop sound.

With a line-up true to the music they love, the group has now produced a full-length CD, "Next Door to Heaven" for Crow Records, showing off their songwriting and arranging talents with 13 original songs and a couple of classics honoring their heroes. The recording has made its way to dance floors world-wide, exciting boppers, strollers, swingers and lovers everywhere, while propelling the group to new heights of popularity.

Thousands have cheered as The Fabulous Harmonaires light up the stage with their powerful harmonies in the great tradition of 50s and 60s Doo Wop, R & B and Rock & Roll. From appearances at the Viva Las Vegas Weekender to The Hot Rod & Kustom Kar show at the world-famous Continental Club in Austin, these modern Doo-Wop trendsetters have excited crowds across the country and even became an international phenomenon at the Screamin' Festival in Barcelona, Spain in 2005. The overseas performance was so well received a full European tour is now in the works for 2007.

With barn-burning rave-ups, misty-eyed tales of lost love and foot-stompin' boppers, The Fabulous Harmonaires deliver the sounds that drive crowds crazy. Or, as Jerome Desvaux of Continental Restyling raved, "...the best band I've seen in the last couple of years! A band with so much talent and so much class deserves widespread exposure."
